Animals on the edge

Little explorers must select and learn all about an 'animal on the edge'.

WEE CRITTERS

INTERACTIVE ANIMAL EDUCATION

In the video we talked about how Jane Goodall studied chimpanzees in the wild and Gerald Durrell saved volcano rabbits and pink pigeons.

Using the template overleaf, little explorers should select and research an animal that they would choose to help and be a 'wildlife warrior' for. They can draw a picture of their chosen animal and complete the facts about them!

Name of your animal

Where does your animal live?

What threats are facing your animal?

Write down 5 facts about your animal!

WEE CRITTERS

INTERACTIVE ANIMAL EDUCATION

Imagine that you are a superhero and that your job is to make the world a greener and cleaner place. Draw a picture of yourself as this superhero thinking aboutsome of the points below:

- what would you wear?
- would you have a sidekick?
- what would your superpowers be and how would they help the environment and the animals we share the planet with?
- where would you go?

Spread the word

Little explorers must select and learn all about an 'animal on the edge'.

WEE CRITTERS
INTERACTIVE ANIMAL EDUCATION

As 'wildlife warriors' we should let other people know about the dangers facing our world and the 'wee ways' we can all help! Here are some ways your little explorers can 'spread the word'!

- Make posters to display in your class or school corridors.
- Do a presentation for other pupils in your school.
- Invite the principal to visit your class to hear about the wee ways your class are changing the world.
- Have a special school assembly (you could do this on earth day or world animal day) which focuses on these themes!
